

SEEKS LIFE IN COURT

Daughter of Murdered Man
Tries to Kill Prisoner.

ACCUSED ALMOST STRANGLED

Alleged Leader of New York's "Black Hand" Attacked by Seventeen-year-old Child of Society's Victim.
Father Had Been Shot Down Because He Refused to Pay Tribute.

New York, Jan. 29.—Methods of the vendetta were exploited in a Brooklyn courtroom to-day, and but for the prompt action of officers, an Italian, alleged to be a leader of the so-called "Black Hand Society," would have been killed by the seventeen-year-old daughter of a man whom he is alleged to have shot when the latter refused to submit to blackmail. The affair took place in the Butler Street Court, where Frank Rosene is charged with the murder of Joseph Trappino, last October.

Trappino, who was a well-to-do contractor, had received a number of threatening letters demanding the payment of $1,000 on pain of death, and had once been the victim of a stabber. Finally he was accosted on the street by a man, whom the police aver was Rosene, and after a few moments' conversation Trappino was shot and later died from his wounds. In his death-bed statement he declared he was shot because he would not pay tribute to the "Black Hand," and that Rosene did the shooting.

When the prisoner was arraigned to-day, Alena Trappino, who, but seventeen years old, is powerfully built, was in court with her mother, the widow of the murdered man, and her two young brothers. While the court officers were arraigning the prisoner she edged close to him as she could. His attention was attracted for a moment to the magistrate, who asked him how he pleaded to the charge.

"Not guilty," was the response. The words had hardly died on his lips before the daughter of the man who is now dead threw herself upon Rosene. She grabbed at his collar, and tried to choke him.

"Assassin! assassin!" she screamed, and it took the combined efforts of three officers to release her hold on the prisoner. Magistrate Green held Rosene without bail for the grand jury, on the charge of homicide.

EXAMINES GRUETT'S PAPERS.

Bailey Investigating Committee
Questions Star Witness.

Austin, Jan. 29.—J. P. Gruett, of St. Louis, former secretary and treasurer of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, was on the witness stand before the legislative investigating committee at last night's session and the greater part of to-day's session.

He gave some testimony that was of a damaging nature to Senator Bailey, but the severe cross-examination to which he was subjected by the attorneys for Mr. Bailey tended to discredit some of the testimony which he had given. He went into an explanation of the manner in which the Standard Oil Company conducted its business, and set forth that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company was a part and parcel of the Standard Oil Company.

He said that the papers which have been quoted so frequently came into his possession by the advice of H. C. Pierce, who told him that they were confidential, and told him not to leave them with the other papers of the company in the office files. He said that when he left the company and his private papers were taken to his home, the papers in question were taken with them in a bundle, where he (Gruett) later found them.

Ex-Astorian General Crane then had Mr. Gruett examine the papers. Gruett examined the $1,500 voucher and said that the notation thereon, "Account of Texas cases," was placed there by himself at the suggestion of H. C. Pierce. He said that the notation purporting to be a receipt for $1,500, signed by H. C. Pierce, indicated to him that Mr. Pierce had paid Mr. Bailey $1,500 in connection with the Texas cases.

DRYDEN'S OPPONENTS FIRM.

Deadlock in New Jersey Senatorial Fight Continues Unbroken.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 29.—The legislature cast three ballots for a United States Senator to-day, and there being no prospect of accomplishing an election, postponed further voting until next Tuesday. The balloting developed no material change in the deadlock. The Dryden forces remain solidly for their candidate, and the eight Republicans who oppose him showed no disposition to recede from the stand they had taken.

Before the legislature convened, there seemed to be a mutual understanding that no serious effort would be made to break the deadlock until Mr. Dryden had been given the public hearing for which he has asked, and which will take place in the assembly chamber at 2 o'clock next Monday afternoon. Mr. Dryden's friends were not quite satisfied with the press notices that have been published relative to the hearing, and asked that it be made plain that it is not to partake of the nature of a mere caucus or conference between Mr. Dryden and the members of the legislature, but will be a public affair, open to any person wishing to attend.

COLT CANNOT WIN.

Deadlock Unbroken in Rhode Island
Senatorial Fight.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 29.—In spite of persistent rumors of a break of the Wetmore men to Colt to-day, the two ballots which were taken made no change in the stubborn deadlock in the election of a United States Senator. The ballots to-day were the tenth and eleventh, and a result of the uncompromising attitude of the supporters of both the Republican candidates, there is a growing belief that Col. Samuel P. Colt, the rubber manufacturer, cannot be elected. Among the politicians a shift of Wetmore men to the Colt ranks had been expected, but even the Colt men have never claimed that they could swing votes enough to obtain the necessary fifty-one.

The fifty-one vote to-day, with one Goddard man absent, was as follows: Goddard, 46; Colt, 28; Wetmore, 31; Utter, 1.

JEFFERSON DAVIS ELECTED.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 29.—Former Gov. Jefferson Davis was elected United States Senator by the Arkansas legislature to-day, receiving 118 votes. Former Congressman Breckinridge received one vote, and John W. Worthington, late Republican candidate for governor, five votes.

CAT SCARES CHILD TO DEATH.

Baby Succumbs to Lockjaw After Angora Crawls Into Its Crib.

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—Scared into lockjaw by fright at finding a black angora cat in her crib, Nellie Tribulos, the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Tribulos, died last night in agony.

That tetanus should have developed, although the cat did not even scratch the infant, makes the case, the coroner's physicians say, one of the most remarkable in medical annals.

It is thought that the child's fright was so great that it had the same effect on her as if the cat had attacked her with its claws.

The child was in perfect health until Friday night last, when it was frightened by the cat, which went to sleep in the baby's crib.

The child was asleep in a second-story back room, and the cat, an unusually large one, crept upstairs and coiled itself up at the bottom of the crib.

Mrs. Tribulos, attracted by the cries of her little daughter, hurried upstairs. Just as she reached the crib the cat, which was aroused from its slumber by her approach, walked to the head of the crib.

As the cat passed the baby's head Mrs. Tribulos noticed that her little daughter ceased crying. Her little head began to tremble, and her jaws set fast. The lockjaw continued until the end came.

"SALOME" WILL BE GIVEN

Slight Changes Will Remove Objections to Strauss Play.

Indications Now Are It Will Be Produced at Metropolitan To-morrow Night as Scheduled.

New York, Jan. 29.—Although the tickets for the first performance of "Salome," which may be held at the New Amsterdam Theatre on Tuesday, February 5, are printed and ready to be exchanged, there is a feeling at the Metropolitan Opera House that the Strauss opera will, after all, be sung here Thursday, and that the protest of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company will be withdrawn.

A meeting of all the directors of the Opera and Real Estate Company, which will be attended also by the directors of the Conried company, will be held to-morrow in George G. Haven's office.

Mr. Conried has heard from several of Mr. Haven's associates that they may be willing to allow repetitions of the opera in case certain changes are made. Ernest Goerlitz, the business manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, said to-night that both he and Mr. Conried now believe that the opera will be performed as announced on Thursday.

The changes will be made in the scene following the appearance of the head of John the Baptist on the stage. It is necessary for Miss Fremstad to be near the head, as the orchestration is very strong at this point. The head will not be hidden from view behind the pillar, as was reported, but the lights will be lowered until it would not be possible for the audience to see the object to which Miss Fremstad addresses her amorous rhapsody.

The dance of the seven veils will not be shortened. There never was any idea of altering that episode.

Alfred Hart believes that the performance will lose nothing in artistic effect by this slight change.

VAMPIRE CAUSES PANIC.

Weird Being Believed by Ignorant
Chicago Police to Have Slain Child.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Weird stories of a vampire, believed by the more ignorant in the Polish colony about the South Chicago steel mills to have slain and mutilated ten-year-old Walter Krupa, have thrown the community into such a panic that the managers of big manufacturing industries have found it impossible to get the men to leave their families. Marks of teeth on the neck of a dead child, who disappeared December 14, and whose body was found last week, frozen in the ice of a swamp in the outskirts of the suburb, have convinced the superstitious that murder surrounds the lad's death.

Descriptions are even given of a shocking-looking being, which lived for nearly a year in a hut on the edge of the swamp, and disappeared about the time the boy's body was found. The creature is mentioned in the probable author of the latter's theory. Without crediting the vampire theory the police think it possible that the description may fit the real murderer, and are securing the country for the missing man.

FAVOR CRIMINAL APPEALS.

Bill Enabling Government to Go to Higher Courts Approved.

The Senate Committee on the Judiciary has decided to report favorably a bill giving the government the right of appeal in criminal cases. The bill, which passed the House on the recommendation of the President, and which, in an amended form, was subsequently passed by the Senate, and later referred back to the Senate committee, will be entirely rewritten by the subcommittee having it in charge.

The committee has had the question under serious consideration for some time, and the new draft of the bill, which will be presented to the Senate at an early date, will meet the objections which have been raised in the past. If it becomes a law it will apply to any cases that may then be pending in the courts, but which may not have reached the stage of appeal.

Announce Decisions Promptly.

Commissioner West yesterday approved the recommendation of the superintendent of police, that the police trial board be required to announce its decision and impose penalties in all cases on the day of the trial, the testimony to be transcribed thereafter, except in complicated cases, where decision may be reserved.

Rogers, receiver for the Southern Mutual Investment and American Reserve Bond companies to-day filed suits against 2,700 bond holders to recover money he claims was illegally paid in the redemption of securities amounting to $1,250,000. Coupon holders in every State in the Union are affected.

FIVE KILLED IN B. &amp; M. WRECK

Express, Stopped by Mysterious Signal, Run Into by Freight.

Flagman Sent Back to Stop Approaching Train Falls—Dead Are Members of Train Crews.

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 29.—Five trainmen dead and a passenger injured in the result of a wreck on the Fitchburg division of the Boston and Maine Railroad, three-quarters of a mile west of West Deerfield, at 4:20 o'clock this morning.

The killed were on express train No. 11, bound west, which was standing in a deep cut, brought there by a signal given the engineer by some one back in the train.

A flagman was sent back to warn the westbound freight, known to be close behind, but for some unknown reason the warning failed and the rear end of the stationery express, and the freight crashed at full speed into the rear of the stationery express, and burned, incinerating the bodies of those killed.

Two were in the combination car at the rear of the express of duty. The other three were in charge of the train. Seven passengers were thrown from seats and berths, but only one was injured. He is a sailor, whose name is not known. The crew of the freight train saved themselves by jumping.

Frank Barr, general manager of the Boston and Maine Railroad, declares the company as yet does not know the real cause of the wreck. The company is trying to find who gave the signal which stopped the express.

OPPOSE ARMY CANTEEN.

Union Methodist Episcopal Church
Votes Against It.

The Union Methodist Episcopal Church, by a unanimous vote, last Sunday evening, expressed itself as opposed to the restoration of the army canteen. The pastor, Rev. D. Reese Murray, in commenting on the action of his church, said:

"We do not believe that a canteen on the inside will save soldiers from vice on the outside. We indulge in the belief that Congress has power to suppress outside dives, as a war measure or otherwise, so that one sin may not be used as an excuse for the re-establishment of another."

"We believe that when a soldier finds his patriotism and his oath can be kept in trim only by the support of ardent drinkers, he is a poor substitute for an honorable and valorous man."

Mrs. Octavia Sewell Dead.

Mrs. Octavia Sewell, widow of General Leonard Sewell, of New Orleans, died at her residence, 215 O street northwest, this city, yesterday. Mrs. Sewell was for a number of years connected with the Cercle des Precieuses Ridicules, popularly called the "French Club," of this city, first as secretary, and until the last few months, when failing health compelled retirement, as its president, and was widely known in diplomatic and foreign circles as a most accomplished linguist.

Her daughter, Miss Rosa Sewell, is translator of the Postoffice Department.

TWO THAW JURORS

QUICKLY DISMISSED

R. Brendt, of Hastings. Their marriage did not turn out well, and after she had obtained a divorce she went on the stage for two or three years.

Walker is a Clubman.

Mr. Walker, who is a member of the Ardley, New York, and the New York Athletic Club, and of the Automobile Club of America, is a Harvard graduate.

He told Mr. Jerome, on examination, that he knew Stanford White slightly, had met him a number of times on social occasions, but that he did not believe his acquaintance with the slain architect would embarrass him in any way in an effort to reach a fair verdict. Later on, he said that he knew the defendant, and several members of his family, too, but he still maintained that he could render a perfectly unbiased verdict. He knew the Thaws no better than he had known Mr. Walker, he said.

Harry Thaw himself seems to be steadily improving in health and spirits. He appears more and more at ease as the days go by, and to-day he frequently consulted with his counsel while the testimony was being examined. The selection of Mr. Deussen seemed to please him especially, and he was obviously urging Mr. Gleason and Mr. Hartridge to accept the railroad man.

When court convened in the morning, the family who have attended any of the sessions of the trial were present all day to-day. The countess, as on Monday, sat in front of her mother, and with her brother, Joseph Thaw.

May McKenzie Still Present.

Mrs. Thaw, the prisoner's mother, sat between her other daughter, Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who was, as usual, accompanied by her chorus girl friend, May McKenzie.

Just before court convened after the noon recess, Mrs. Harry Thaw went into the pen and had a few minutes' talk with her husband, returning to her seat by Miss McKenzie before Justice Fitzgerald took his seat.

There is little or no conversation among the women in court. They come in a few minutes before court time, take their seats quietly, and wait for Harry Thaw's brief nod and smile as he passes them on the way from the pen to his seat with his counsel. The rest of the time they sit in silence, a pale, negative, silently undesirable little group. It does not require the trenchant pen of one of the ablest members of the sympathy squad to make it clear that "rich Mrs. Thaw" is just a poor, old mother."

When court convened in the morning, the special venire of 100 talemens summoned the day before were present. Late in the afternoon the original panel of 200 was exhausted, and the examiners started on with the new list. When the roll of the new venire was called, twelve members failed to answer to their names. It will cost them $100 each if they cannot put up a good excuse.

Dennee Is Intelligent Man.

There was little of interest in the morning session until the name of Dennee was reached. He was one of the most intelligent of the talemens examined and answered all the questions put to him satisfactorily, promptly, and clearly. When it was apparent that neither side had any objection to him and he was about to be sworn, he leaned over to the judge and made what was evidently an earnest plea to be excused. It was of no avail. Justice Fitzgerald shook his head and said to Clerk Denney:

"Swear in the juror." Mr. Dennee took seat No. 10.

James S. Smoot, of 184 Seventh avenue, had served in a capital case, and the defense challenged him peremptorily. C. Tiffany Richards knew Stanford White well and was excused. Two or three others had doctor's certificates stating that to be shut up indefinitely might prejudice their health.

After Jurors Campbell and Faure had been excused, at the opening of the afternoon session, the examination went on.

Outside of the excusing of the two jurors, the chief thing of interest in the courtroom to-day was the efforts of the Thaw women folk to prove to the outside and observing world that they were all at harmony, and that no dissension disturbed their tranquillity. The result was a marked degree during the day. He confided to his keepers that he had dreamed he would be free by Washington's birthday. He said an indistinct figure had stood over his tomb, cell, as he slept, and made this prophecy.

Among the spectators in the courtroom was Bartow S. Weeks, the lawyer who had defended Roland B. Moineux. The women in the Thaw party watched him curiously when told who he was.

Women Can Harmonize Now.

The harmony arranged over night among the women members of the Thaw family became most apparent at recess. The Countess of Yarmouth, Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, and May McKenzie, together with Mrs. William Thaw, sat and chatted, apparently merrily, together while eating their luncheon in the empty courtroom. It is said that the breach between the Countess of Yarmouth and the young Mrs. Thaw has been healed, because it has occasioned the prisoner sleepless nights and considerable worry.

When the countess entered the courtroom she waved up to Miss McKenzie, and in a cheery voice said: "Good morning," accompanying the salutation with a smile. She also greeted the younger Mrs. Thaw cordially, as did the elder Mrs. Thaw. This attitude was maintained throughout the day, and the entire party did a merry good-by to the prisoner as he was taken back to his cell to be locked up for the night, and left together for their hotel.

Barrymore's Presence Explained.

In commenting on the presence of "Jack" Barrymore at yesterday's session of court, Daniel O'Reilly, one of the counsel for the defense, said this afternoon:

"'Jack' Barrymore's presence in the courtroom is just one grandstand play on the part of the district attorney to prevent Evelyn Nesbit Thaw from going on the stand."

"It won't work. That is, it doesn't alter any plan of the defense one iota. Young Mrs. Thaw cannot be affected by such a move."

This positive statement, from one of the smartest of Thaw's counsel, indicated that the battle for Thaw's life would be quite as fierce as any one has anticipated that counsel are watching the moves of one another in the veriest details, and that nothing reflecting on any phase of the case will go unchallenged.

Later to-night it was rumored that still another juror will be excused to-morrow. Neither the district attorney nor counsel for the defense would discuss this rumor when seen.
